Event - Decision on what matters?

Ralph:
I think it is blatantly obvious that we need a fire. We need the fire to keep the smoke going so that we can be rescued. We need the big ‘uns to take care of the fire but no. They all go off hunting and when a ship was spotted, they just went ahead and blow it by letting the fire die out. We also need to have shelters so that we can sleep in peace and take refuge from the rain. No one cared about the shelters except me and Simon. We had to force people to help and the minute they have shown their face move this, move there, they are off doing other more “important” things. If everyone had helped build the shelters and get things over and done with quickly and as a team, we could have had more people to help with the hunting and other stuff but again no. Everyone was more interested in their own stuff and could not careless about what was truly important.

Jack:
What we need is meat. We need to have fun and enjoy ourselves while we are here. I know we need to be rescued but we do not need to get so overreacted and be so fussy over it. We need to enjoy ourselves while we still can. We need to feast and eat meat. Who cares about some stupid fire! Well, me and my hunters do not care. I should be chief because I command the authority and when I say I will hunt, I do. Plus, I have results. I hunted the pig and caught it. I gave everyone the meat of my hard work. However, I am criticized and blamed for the fire going out just for a short while just because I borrowed Sam and Eric for a while to help me hunt. We do all this talking and gatherings just for fun! It is just wasting time because what we decide the ‘Chief’ does not carry them out.

Piggy:
They are all children, all of them! They do not understand the severity of our situation and are so caught up in their own world and circle of fun. They do not get it! They do not. They go about having fun, getting meat but they always seem to forget the most crucial thing which is getting rescued from this island. We could have been rescued today but no… They just had to go and play some hunting game to catch a bloody boar! Yes, they caught the boar but we failed to get rescued because they were playing.
